12:38 PDT

This issue is fully resolved, and we've auto-updated the app for all affected sellers. If you haven't already, please be sure that you're running the latest version of Point of Sale for Android (4.76.2). For step-by-steps on updating your app, have a look at our Support Center: <http://squ.re/2ILboUr>.

All impacted customers should have received an email by now with additional details. Again, please do not re-attempt any voided transactions. Thanks for your patience today, and we apologize for the frustration this caused.

 Monitoring
11: 39 PDT

As our team continues to work on resolving the root cause of the voided payments, please do not re-attempt any voided transactions. If you were impacted by this issue, keep an eye on the email inbox that's associated with your Square account—you'll hear from us shortly.

We continue to monitor the situation, and we will post another update here when the issue has been completely resolved.

 Identified
10:11 PDT

Our team has identified the root cause of the issue that's causing some charges to be voided after a completed sale, and is actively working on a fix. If you've experienced this issue, please do not re-attempt your voided payment. The payment has been captured in our system, and we will reprocess them for you as soon as the patch has been released.

If you're currently running Android Point of Sale (version 4.76.1), and do not have any payments waiting in Offline Mode, we recommend you delete and reinstall the app. Reinstalling the app from the Google Play Store will reset you back to version 4.75.2, which does not have this problem.

 Investigating
09:28 PDT

We're investigating an issue where sellers using the latest version of Android Point of Sale (version 4.76.1) may experience voided charges following a completed sale. Our engineering team is actively working on a fix to this issue.
